Coates rides to Regina for film industry

Rally. About 200 people met at Sound Studio, then marched to provincial legislature

A caravan of vehicles made its way from Saskatoon to the Sound Studios in Regina Monday to show support for the film industry, led by actor Kim Coates.

After an early-morning pancake breakfast, 20 cars, 85 motorbikes, a bus and one semi left Saskatoon and hit the highway. A police escort joined the caravan once it reached the Regina city limits.

A rally of about 200 people, many holding signs and flags, met the motorcade at the Sound Studio, then marched to the provincial legislature. Passing vehicles honked in support as the caravan of protestors crawled across the Albert Street Bridge.

"What the government wants to do is essentially rape and kill an entire industry of incredibly talented people," Coates told reporters. "They don't have their numbers right.... These tax incentives are used all over the world."

Katrina German is a Saskatoon-based social media strategist and is currently developing a television documentary series. "We have high spirits," says German "We came to Regina because we wanted to encourage the government to work with us."

German, who while growing up lived in 10 different Saskatchewan towns, wants to see the industry remain viable in this province.

"It's a small industry (in Saskatoon) but it's also very important. We're all living there and continuing to create from there. So we all work together with the Regina crew to be the entire industry in Saskatchewan. We just want to stay here and work."

Petition presented

- The House. As the rally gathered outside, Saskatoon Riversdale MLA Danielle Chartier spoke in the House about the effect the government's plan for a new non-refundable tax credit will have on the film industry.
- The petition. Chartier presented a petition to the House of signatures from those who doubt the government's plan.
- Signatures. Taking up two armloads of paper, the petition totalled 8,126 signatures from dozens of Saskatchewan towns. Premier Brad Wall had left the House before the petition could be presented.

'Going straight down': Witness recalls crash

Mid-air collision. 'Part of a second' could have made a difference, pilot says

A witness to a mid-air collision in Saskatchewan that took the lives of five people saw one of the planes nose-diving before it disappeared behind hills and trees.

"As it was going down it was getting louder and louder and then all of a sudden it was just quiet," Jackie Mark said in a telephone interview on Monday. "When it hit the ground, I didn't see it, but then there was just dead silence."

Mark was having coffee at home in St. Brieux on Saturday morning with her mother when a loud noise prompted her to look out the window.

"I told my mom that I thought a plane was crashing. I just saw the one plane. It looked intact but just going straight down."

The two women drove down the road to confirm there had been a crash but didn't see anything at first.

"I just assumed if there was a plane crash there would be smoke or there would be fire or there would be some kind of dust. We didn't see anything," she said.

"There was something in the field ... a piece of something but I didn't pay that much attention. When I got back ... I realized it was a piece of a plane or of a wing. That is when I did call 911."

The crash took place about a kilometre from her home.

An experienced pilot said the collision probably happened in the blink of an eye.

"It happened so quickly. If you saw them with any amount of warning, you could have avoided it, and when you think about it and the speed they were travelling, a part of a second would have made a difference," said Tom Ray of the Regina Flying Club.

"Normally it's 'see and be seen' as far as going into smaller airports like that or flying over a smaller airport, but they were probably coming about 90 degrees. One was northbound, one was eastbound and maybe there was sun in the eyes. Who knows?"

Ray suggested the collision may have been similar to a vehicle being T-boned at an intersection.

"Typically pilots look ... forward where they're going mostly rather than 90 degrees off to the side."

Debris from the planes — a Piper PA-28 and a Lake Buccaneer amphibious plane — was scattered on grassy fields and among trees near St. Brieux, northeast of Saskatoon. One of the planes was submerged in water.

The bodies of the victims were recovered Monday.

Police had yet to identify the people killed, but family members confirmed the three on board the Piper were Denny Loree, Eric Donovan and his 11-year-old son Wade. All lived near Mossleigh, Alta.

An obituary in a Saskatchewan newspaper said Joy and Eric Jackson of Regina were also killed.

"We know that (collisions are) very rare, especially in uncontrolled airspace," Ray said. "The fact that they were in the same location, at the same time and at the same altitude is just a very freaky thing." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Crown in Saskatchewan

App highlights Jubilee events

The province is celebrating Queen Elizabeth II's Diamond Jubilee with an iPhone app called the Crown in Saskatchewan.

The app, designed by Regina agency the Phoenix Group, shows information for celebrations across the province, from a schedule of events for the royal visit on May 23 to Twitter feeds that mention the royals and Saskatchewan.

"We wanted to introduce the app to get a little bit more of a younger demographic talking about the Crown in Saskatchewan," said Jeff Welke, executive director of communications for the office of protocol. "The best part about this is that there is room to do more with it in the future. Should other royals visit, if they come back — which they often do — we can use the app again."

The app, which is part of an initiative that explores Saskatchewan's connection to the Crown, is similar to an app released by the ministry of culture and heritage. But Welke was confident Saskatchewan is the only province that has regionalized the concept.

"We considered this to be a unique investment. It has good value," he said.

The app cost the province $36,400. METRO

Lobby effort fails

City balks at plastic-bag ban

Plastic Free Saskatoon, the group that submitted a petition to city council to ban disposable plastic bags, is frustrated with the city's decision not to implement a bag ban.

"I am disappointed but not surprised by the committee's decision," said group member Alex Zahara. "The trouble with disposable plastics is that their consequences are pervasive and the hazard is more long-term. I am hopeful, however, that we can come up with other solutions to the problem."

The recommendation presented to the city's environmental advisory committee cited cost and enforcement as the main reason for eschewing a ban, but noted it does recognize the issue as "critical."

Plastic Free Saskatoon said the group will shift to raising awareness rather than lobbying. METRO

Writing wrongs: Inmates release gang prevention book

Youth. 'Untold' stories will try to steer young people away from a life in street gangs

saskatoon@metronews.ca

Through the power of writing, a group of inmates at the Saskatchewan Provincial Correctional Centre are striving to make a difference in the decisions youth make.

In conjunction with anti-gang organization STR8UP, 13 inmates at the SPCC contributed to a gang-prevention book entitled STR8UP and Gangs: The Untold Stories, which focuses on steering youth clear of life on the streets.

Published by Saskatchewan-based Hear My Heart Books, STR8UP and Gangs is an autobiographical compilation of the inmates' lives. At-risk youth, children and classrooms around the country are its target readers.

Inmate-writer Aaron Ross hopes younger generations can take a page from his book of life.

"My goal was to aim it at the younger generations coming up behind me. They can learn from my mistakes and take a little bit of what they hear in my life and relate it to their own," said Ross.

38-year-old inmate Brendan Jimmy has been writing all his life and despite a troubled past, he's intent on guiding youth away from the temptation of street life.

Making a difference

"If they learn from our stories it may click in their heads."

John Siwak, 28, an inmate-contributor to STR8UP and Gangs.
He hopes the book will make a difference in the lives of troubled youths

"I've led a pretty colourful life. I've done things that I'm not proud of and I can't even talk about," said Jimmy.

Jimmy explained that his message in STR8UP and Gangs embodies hope and inspiration. His writing is aimed at kids living on the street and those without parent figures around.

"One of the big points I made in the book was that I want to see more of our native brothers in universities, in the National Football League and the National Hockey League and for them to follow their dreams," added Jimmy, a father of three.

John Siwak, 28, is another inmate-contributor of STR8UP and Gangs. Siwak recalled being 11 years old and having two former gang members come to speak to youth in a classroom setting. At the time, Siwak disregarded what his presenters had to say. Now Siwak is on the other side of the fence and when he's not incarcerated, he's helping STR8UP with school presentations and similar gang prevention initiatives.

"Now we're the ones getting pointed at and laughed at by these little kids," Siwak chuckled. "It's just a funny circle. It must have had an impact on me. If some kid is doing terrible right now or five or ten years down the road and wants to get out of that life, hopefully they can get something from (STR8UP and Gangs)."

STR8UP and Gangs was launched at McNally and Robinson in Saskatoon on Monday and will have a second launching at the White Buffalo Youth Lodge from 2 to 5 p.m. on Wednesday. STR8UP and Gangs can be purchased for $10 at McNally and Robinson, with a portion of proceeds going towards STR8UP and gang prevention.

Lieutenant of literacy. Block empowers prisoners

Diann Block's work as a Saskatchewan Provincial Correctional Centre cultural and community coordinator has helped give inmates of the facility a voice beyond the bars.

An ambassador for Aboriginal literacy in the province, Block's work is empowering. She has pioneered a litany of literary and artistic programs at the SPCC and will be recognized for her contributions on May 24 in Regina when she receives the Saskatchewan Aboriginal Literacy Network Literacy Practitioners Award.

Beginning with her coordination of Creative Escape in 2010, a collective work of art, poetry and short fiction by SPCC inmates, similar initiatives have exploded at the prison since. From an all-inmate art exhibit at Saskatoon Community Youth Arts Programming Inc.'s gallery entitled ConArt, to the booking of iconic Aboriginal playwright Tomson Highway for a writing workshop with the inmates, Block has been an instrumental in promoting Aboriginal literacy

Block is confident that writing and expression through art play integral roles in the rehabilitation process.

"It gives them self-expression and it helps them to get their feelings out," said Block. "A lot of the inmates are so creative and they've never gotten any kind of kudos for that. This has been really good for them. They'll smile like toddlers — they're so happy to get some good feedback for once in their life."

Block has also entered inmates' poetry and art in contests around the country and recently forged a strong relationship with the University of Saskatchewan English Department, who sent student interns and professors to work with the inmates in the past year.

B.C. Three confirmed dead in float-plane crash

Three people have died in the crash of a float plane that went down as horrified onlookers watched it burst into flames in southern British Columbia.

"Our information is that, tragically, none survived the accident," Transportation Safety Board (TSB) spokesman Bill Yearwood said Monday.

He confirmed the de Havilland Beaver aircraft went down just before 7 p.m. on Sunday, only minutes after takeoff from Okanagan Lake.

The aircraft was heading to its home base of Pitt Meadows, about 40 kilometres east of Vancouver, when it slammed into a steep, wooded hillside along Highway 97C and caught fire.

The coroner and three TSB inspectors were due to arrive at the crash site on Monday, and Yearwood said there was little information about the victims.

A final report on what could have caused the crash will not be released for several months.

G20. Report clears RCMP of wrongdoing at summit

The RCMP acted in a "reasonable and appropriate" fashion during the 2010 Toronto G20 summit marred by violence and mass arrests, says the watchdog that keeps an eye on the national police force.

In its long-awaited report, the Commission for Public Complaints Against the RCMP says planning was thorough, placement of security fencing justifiable and intelligence-gathering done with attention to the rights of demonstrators.

In addition, there was no indication that RCMP undercover operators or event monitors acted out of line or as agents provocateurs, the commission says in its report released Monday.

Though Mounties were involved in three incidents of kettling — or boxing in — protesters, contrary to RCMP policy, they acted reasonably on orders of the Toronto police in charge, says the report.

Plane hits Nepalese slope, killing 15

Asia. Northern airport is a gateway to the revered Muktinath temple, a popular destination for trekkers, Hindu pilgrims

A plane crashed into a mountain in the Himalayas while trying to land at an airport in northern Nepal on Monday, killing 15 people and injuring six, some critically.

It was carrying two pilots and a flight attendant — all Nepalese — along with 16 Indians and two Danish citizens, both of whom survived, officials said.

Television footage showed the Danes being taken inside a hospital in the nearby city of Pokhara, the man being led on foot and the woman crying in pain as she was carried on a stretcher.

The plane was turning to land at Jomsom Airport when it crashed, said Laxmi Raj Sharma, chief government administrator in the area.

It broke into pieces but did not catch fire. Sharma said an initial investigation indicated the Dornier aircraft, which belonged to the local Agni Air company, might have had technical problems.

Rescue was swift because the plane crashed just a few metres from an army camp at Jomsom.

- She said they had to climb over "hands and arms" to get out of the plane.

Canucks confident in job security

Economic climate. Survey suggests 75 per cent are 'extremely secure' about their jobs; but one in three are dissatisfied with their career progression

A new survey of employees suggests tough economic times are taking a toll on career paths and job satisfaction.

The survey conducted by Harris-Decima Research on behalf of Ceridian Canada suggests there are significantly more workers than last year who believe they will not be getting a pay boost, bonus or promotion in the next year.

And four in 10 say they believe their employer is using the bad economy as an excuse to deny them a promotion or more money.

The level of dissatisfaction was somewhat surprising given that on the question of whether respondents felt secure in their job, 75 per cent said they were "extremely secure" or not concerned about losing their job.

"There were some surprising findings," said John Cardella, Ceridian's vice-president of human resources.

He points out that 27 per cent of the respondents who said they were unsatisfied had left their job as a result.

Harris-Decima polled 800 employed Canadians in early March. Human resources firm Ceridian said one of the interesting findings is that employees who are given performance reviews tended to be more satisfied. Cardella said that is likely because they felt "connected" to the business.

The survey found on the job satisfaction indicators, there has been a dramatic shift downward in attitudes.

Eighty-five per cent of the 800 polled say they don't expect a promotion for another year, compared to 39 per cent in 2011, and 43 per cent say they don't expect a salary increase, compared to 27 per cent 12 months ago. Overall, 31 per cent expressed dissatisfaction with their career progression, eight percentage points higher than a similar survey conducted in 2011.

Banking. Guidelines set for mobile payments

Canada's financial institutions say they've developed voluntary guidelines for mobile payments that will work with technology already in place.

The Canadian Bankers Association says the guidelines are designed to work with the same security standards used by chip-enabled credit and debit cards and using the same hardware employed for non-touch cards.

The guidelines were developed by Canada's major banks and credit unions, although analysts say using smartphones as surrogate wallets to pay for purchases is still a few years off.

Telecom analyst Iain Grant of the SeaBoard Group says smartphones first need to be equipped with what's called Near Field Communication, a technology that allows consumers to tap or swipe their phones against terminals to pay for goods.

CATS AND THEIR CURIOUS APPEAL

SHE SAYS...
Jessica Napier
metronews.ca/shesays

I take a lot of flak for being a "cat person." Over the years, cats have been stigmatized as antisocial creatures favoured by spinsters and compulsive hoarders. If dogs are man's best friend, cats are like a weird creepy aunt you try to avoid at dinner parties.

In actuality, cats are quietly cool creatures. Dogs are needy companions desperate for your affection, whereas cats are a low-maintenance alternative. They won't leap against you when they enter your home or mount your leg in an unwelcome bout of excitement. They're independent and effortlessly playful in a way that doesn't scream, "Look at me! I'm trying so hard!"

Nowhere is the unintentionally comical nature of cats more evident than online. The Internet LOVES cats. Cat videos are almost as pervasive as pornography, and the comical lolcats meme has a devoted fan following. If you own a computer, there's no doubt you've seen these humorous image macros, which combine photos of felines with misspelled and grammatically incorrect captions.

In Japan and other Asian countries, these domestic pets have found a new place in public life thanks to the increasingly popular cat cafés. The cafés charge a time-based cover fee for a beverage and a couple of hours' playtime with cuddly calicos and tenacious tabby cats.

Recently, Kate Miltner from the London School of Economics earned international attention for her 98-page dissertation on the popularity of lolcats. Miltner spoke about her work at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology earlier this month during an Internet culture conference. That's right, a scholarly discussion about funny cat pictures happened inside the walls of MIT.

In Japan and other Asian countries, these domestic pets have found a new place in public life thanks to the increasingly popular cat cafés. The cafés charge a time-based cover fee for a beverage and a couple of hours' playtime with cuddly calicos and tenacious tabby cats.

For many urbanites, full-time pet ownership is out of the question. If you work long hours and live in a highrise with restrictions on animals, spending time with rented felines is a convenient alternative.

The cafés attract men and women of all ages who are eager to hang with cats while enjoying their food and drink purrrr-chases. Some establishments even cater to specific tastes, diversifying their offerings by breed, colour and weight.

For allergy sufferers and germaphobes, a café full of prowling cats might seem like a complete nightmare. But if you hasten to roll your eyes and compare visiting a cat café to brunching in the elephant enclosure at the zoo, you're missing the point.

Cities are lonely at times, and cat lovers can find themselves alienated in a culture that tends to favour canines. You have your leash-free dog parks, we can haz our cat cafés.

Brooklyn Decker toughens up for role in Battleship

Action-acting 101. Model-turned-actress had to prove her mettle in front of director Peter Berg

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

After making the jump from modelling to film with the Adam Sandler comedy Just Go With It, Brooklyn Decker has been getting something of a crash course in moviemaking. And her latest, the big budget alien invasion film Battleship — based loosely on the board game — provided some particularly physical lessons.

"I was shooting another movie at the time, and I actually got a set of sides and was told that Peter Berg was directing and I couldn't see a script because it was very secretive at the time," she says, noting that Berg — director of films like Hancock and Friday Night Lights — was enough.

"At the mention of the name Peter Berg, I wanted to audition for it. And so I sent in a tape from location, and then I went to L.A. and auditioned for it three times after that. And then finally I got to actually read with Pete. And I think he wanted to see how tough I was."

How tough are we talking? Let's just say that, to hear Decker tell it, Berg has a rather unique directing style.

"He's known for having a way with directing actors," she says.

"I mean, he'll put himself on the line to make sure he gets what he wants from you in a scene. There were times when he would be screaming along with me, there were times when he would fire a machine gun off in the bushes to get a reaction he wanted."

While Decker's character doesn't actually spend any time on the water, director Berg, for his part, doesn't think that makes her any less important to the story.

"Battleship has a lot of different elements, and Brooklyn is a huge a plot of the film that has nothing to do with ships," he says.

"She's on land fighting for her life with a double-amputee. It's this crazy duo. Brooklyn plays a physical therapist with this wounded warrior from the military, and to me that's a huge part of the film. What's happening on sea is a huge part of the film, the global reaction's a huge part of the film, Obama's a huge character in the movie — his reaction is a part of it."

Action-packed?

Decker just wants good characters

So with an action flick under her belt, is Decker looking for more explosions or heading back to comedies? (She also has the explosion-free What to Expect When You're Expecting due out this Friday.)

"You know, I just want to play really good characters and work with really good directors," she says.

"For example, if you look at all the female characters in Pete's movies, they're so dynamic. You never see a woman in his movies play the damsel in distress. He usually makes women really well-rounded, and if I get a chance to continue playing characters like that, I'll be a very, very happy lady."

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

Adele

Rumour has it: Adele prefers to keep a low profile

She may have a best-selling album that has earned her eight Grammy awards, but there's one part of success that Adele wishes she could avoid all together. "I don't want to be a celebrity. I don't want to be in people's faces," she tells Matt Lauer during an interview for the Today show. "I've managed to stay out of the public eye. The other day I walked through Trafalgar Square on a Sunday afternoon, a tourist haven. I was a bit worried — I was in my pajamas as well because I had been working the day before — (but) nobody recognized me."

Jessica Simpson

Jessica Simpson's baby is a fashionista thanks to mom

Jessica Simpson is loving being a new mom, though having a baby at home as led to at least one new problem: "I'm addicted to buying headbands with massive flowers for Maxwell on Etsy," Simpson posted on Twitter about her newborn daughter. "She is insanely beautiful, I can't help but play dress-up." Online shopping addictions aside, a source close to the family says Simpson is knocking it out of the park when it comes to parenthood. "Jessica is doing great and is really happy," the source tells Us Weekly.

THE WORD
Dorothy Robinson

Simon Cowell and L.A. Reid finally have some company at The X Factor judges' table. At their upfront presentation yesterday, Fox confirmed the rumors that Britney Spears and Demi Lovato have signed on to the singing competition's second season. Lovato is a harmless relief, considering Miley Cyrus' vacant little smirk was in the running. And in theory, Spears makes perfect sense: she's a former high-profile star ready for a comeback, especially one with some disaster insurance. But, even though we've watched her make Starbucks runs in her pajamas, we can't say with certainty that we've ever heard Britney Spears talk.

Tyson Beckford bares all

Tyson Beckford doesn't want you to watch his sex tape, but it's not because he's embarrassed about it. After a tape of him performing solo hit the market, the former Polo model took to Twitter. "Don't even faze me. We all do it, just mine got caught on film," he said of the footage, which was intended for the sparkly eyes of a fellow model friend.

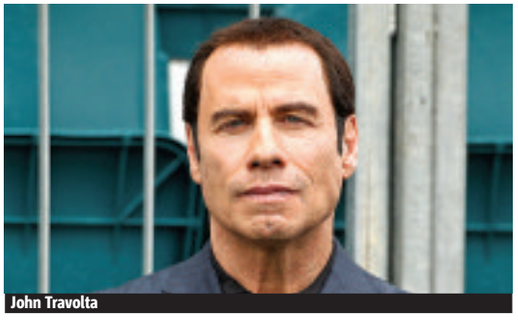
June wedding likely for Drew Barrymore and her beau

Drew Barrymore hasn't been very vocal about her plans, despite having a fiancé and a growing baby bump, but if a recent shopping excursion is any indication, her wedding to Will Kopelman is on its way, according to Us Weekly. Barrymore recently visited a Manhattan bridal shop — with her future mother-in-law in tow — and was spotted trying on veils. Barrymore is expected to tie the knot next month.



John Travolta

Travolta debacle continues as one accuser opts for private trial

There will be no public trial for at least one of John Travolta's accusers, as both sides have agreed the case should be heard by a private judge behind closed doors in mediation, according to Radar Online. The accuser in question was the second of four to come forward in the past week claiming inappropriate behavior by the Grease star during a massage. "(Lawyers for both sides) are working on the ground rules for the evidence and procedure about about how the mediation will proceed," a source says.

BEST HEALTH MINUTE
Bonnie Munday
Editor-in-chief
Best Health Magazine

Walking enough of it is guaranteed to help you drop a clothing size, banish blue moods, help you get more sleep, slash your risk for heart disease and cancer, and spice up your sex life.

Best Health magazine has just come out with a book called the Swap & Drop Diet, and in addition to its ideas about how simple food swaps can really add up over time to weight loss (it also includes a section on how to make healthy choices at fast-food and restaurant chains, a weekly meal planner and a ton of healthy recipes), we included an all-important section on walking for fitness.

It's not just Dr. Oz who recommends getting 10,000 steps a day: ParticipAction does, too, right here in Canada. And so does our Swap & Drop Diet. The reason for that magic number is that research proves walking at this level will burn enough calories to reduce the risk of obesity and chronic disease. The easiest way to reach that 10,000 number and beyond is to wear a pedometer, at least until you get some perspective on what it takes to reach this goal (pedometers can be found at sporting goods stores, fitness stores and some drug stores; they range from inexpensive to pricey). Once you see how many steps your regular day adds up to, begin to gradually increase that number by 300 to 600 steps a day.

If you have any health concerns, be sure to speak with your doctor first to ensure it's safe for you. The Swap & Drop Diet book not only has a step-by-step, easy 12-week plan you can follow, it is full of ideas for how to add more steps, too.

The 'OMG Diet': fact vs. fiction

Mythbusting a new diet. In his bestselling e-book, Six Weeks to OMG, sports scientist Venice Fulton promises to get you 'skinnier than all your friends.' We asked a doctor if the program is healthy enough to trust

romina.mcguinness@metro.lu

Summer is fast approaching, leaving you little time to achieve beach-body perfection. But sports scientist and author Venice Fulton warns that a restrictive diet promising rapid weight loss isn't the answer. "People need a diet that will preserve long-term health and the only way we can do that is by making them experts in understanding how food and their life interact," he says.

Combining nutrition, biochemistry, genetics and psychology, Six Weeks to OMG promises you'll shed the pounds. Curious, we asked nutritionist Dr. Carson Liu to weigh in on the plan.

Skip breakfast

Eating a morning meal around 10 a.m., instead of breakfast increases fat burn: "Skipping breakfast allows you to burn off excess body fat as it's the one time in the day your system is running on empty and moving around," Fulton says. Ideally, you should eat three hours after you wake.

What the doctor says: No way! Eating breakfast helps you lose weight and prevents you from binge-eating at dinner.

Drink black coffee

Caffeine promotes weight loss by boosting the central nervous system by stimulating the fight or flight response using adrenaline. This forces fat cells to empty their contents into the blood and these free fatty acids are then transported to your muscles and used as fuel. This only works if you're drinking on the go, warns Fulton. "If you sit at your desk and not moving, this fat won't be used and will just float around until it is eventually deposited in the arteries."

What the doctor says: Yes! The caffeine in coffee increases metabolic rate and suppresses appetite. As a diuretic, coffee will also cause you to lose water weight.

Focus on satiety

We tend to overeat carbs when we should be having no more than a 40-gram portion with each meal. Size wise, that's the equivalent to a stack of four iPhones. Protein (any source) should take up half of your plate, vegetables the other half. Just don't restrict yourself. "The minute you restrict something from you diet, the more obsessively you will focus on it," adds Fulton.

What the doctor says: Yes! Cutting a certain food from our diet will only make us crave it.

Sleep in

Big sleepers are slimmer and generally healthier than those that survive on little sleep. You must wake up refreshed, claims Fulton. "We all vary in our genetic needs but it's best to allow your body to wake up naturally. Deep sleep allows the thyroid to reset itself properly and get back into full speed once you wake. When your thyroid is high, your metabolism is on turbo boost."

What the doctor says: Yes! Sleep also helps keep stress hormones down: they are released from the adrenal glands.

Go skinny-dipping

Take a 15-minute cold bath in the morning. "Cold water makes the body panic, shifting your metabolic rate into overdrive as heat production is increased in order to protect the core organs," says Fulton. Essentially, the body will use stored body fat as fuel to keep you warm.

What the doctor says: Yes! Exposing the body to cold temperatures does increase metabolic rate.

Fulton's Top 3 diet tips

1 No more cheat days: You can't be strict on yourself at all times, but cheat meals/days mean you risk becoming obsessed with that one moment you 'give' yourself a treat, and you may overdo it.

2 Hunt and wait. Move around for 15 minutes before eating a meal. This will prime the body to receive the food.

3 Control cellulite: Our skin is made up collagen and elastin, both of which are damaged by high levels of insulin (sugar levels). Improve skin quality by eating carbohydrates in moderation and this will control cellulite.

Farro & Mushroom Stuffed Acorn Squash: Savoury combo

The key to ensuring that dinner is both substantial and healthy? Fibre.

Adding plenty of whole grains and vegetables not only provides piles of nutrients, it also fills you up and keeps you full long after the meal is finished. As well, these foods tend to be lower in calories, which means you can load up without getting weighed down.

This one-dish meal is rich in savoury flavours thanks to a blend of mushrooms and cheese, as well as plenty of fibre from the farro.

The flavours of the stuffing combine with the sweetness of acorn squash and fresh, bright citrus and herbs to create a meal that will feel less like you're leaving something out and more like you're indulging in something hearty.

1. Cut acorn squash into quarters. Scoop out and discard seeds. Trim off slice of skin from the curved side of each quarter to allow it to sit flat.

2. Spray a 23-cm-by-23-cm (9-by-9-inch) baking dish with cooking spray and arrange squash in pan, skin side down. Bake in preheated 190 C (375 F) oven for 30 to 40 minutes or until just softened.

This recipe serves four. THE CANADIAN PRESS

When nature calls, don't answer

CHARLES THE BUTLER
askcharlesthebutler@metronews.ca

Recently I read an article in a publication offering social advice and the question was "Is it correct to excuse yourself from the dinner table to use the toilet?"

After reading the writer's comments, I was rather incensed at the sarcasm and lack of detail of the article. So I have decided to address this particular question myself.

Firstly, there is a rule about leaving the table: adults should not leave unless it is an unavoidable circumstance.

I think it is important to not just know a rule, but also to understand the reason it exists. So here are the five reasons why one does not leave the dinner table.

You should only go to the restroom before, or after, your meal. ISTOCK

1. It is not appropriate to ever leave the table to use the toilet during a meal, unless it is urgent — either go beforehand or hold it in.

2. When you leave the table, technically everyone at the table should stop eating or at least slow down and wait for you to return, thus everyone's food is getting cold and this disrupts the flow of the meal.

3. Although most people wash their hands in the restroom, the thought of a toilet and food one after the other is just not appealing.

4. A gentleman never leaves a lady alone at the table, if at all possible.

5. In the event that you must leave the table, do not ever leave your dinner napkin on the table.

It should be left on your chair, traditionally the seat, however for hygiene reasons, it is more common to leave it either on the back of the chair or the arm of the chair.

Tweeting is equivalent to sex: Study

Social media. Research shows that people who talk about themselves have similar brain reactions to those who engaged in eating or sex

MICHELLE CASTILLO
Metro World News

Go ahead, boast about yourself. ISTOCK

Earlier this month Kanye West's fans learned which clothing styles he hated — whether they cared or not. With each 140-characters-or-less statement, the award-winning rapper and questionable fashionista shared his opinions on the outfits he saw around New York.

"I hate button-up shirts with hoodies," West tweeted. "I hate hoodies with sports coats," he added. "I hate sports coats with button-up shirts, jeans and dress shoes," he stated.

This isn't the first time West has let people know exactly what he was thinking, including the day when he provided, in excruciating detail, his decision to buy a bike. West's and other celebrities' propensity to share intimate details of their personal lives online might be rooted in science.

A new study in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences (PNAS) shows that people who talk about themselves had similar brain reactions to those who engaged in eating or sex. People were even willing to give up money in order to keep talking about themselves.

In other words: Boasting about our everyday lives gives us as much pleasure as doing "primary awards" or basic needs activities.

We all need feedback

"The thousands and thousands of responses, the degree of intensity to that person, it must be very confirming of their importance. It pushes people to want to get that kind of feedback and notoriety," Dr. Phil Muskin, chief of consultation-liaison psychiatry at Columbia Psychiatry in New York, told Metro World News.

Dr. David Rubin, a psychiatrist at NY-Presbyterian/Weill Cornell & Columbia believes it's not just a new-media problem that makes it seem that celebrities — and many of us — share too much of themselves online. Even in our day-to-day lives we are aware of people who overshare information about themselves. Twitter, Facebook and blogs are simply a new medium to do it in — and it's much easier since you don't have to do it face-to-face. According to the PNAS study, four out of five postings on social media sites are about a person's immediate experiences.

Freedom from restraint

"It gives people freedom from the restraints of social etiquette, professionalism and the freedom from reactions, letting them divulge more, Rubin said.

"(Fans) can play the role of the friend… People are gathered together to read the mundane aspects of one of their 'friend's' lives. It takes it up a notch and creates some pseudo-connection," Rubin explained.

It also helps that by simply tweeting a statement, there's no immediate negative feedback. That doesn't mean one doesn't eventually have to face consequences. But, because there's no instantaneous chastisement for posting something that isn't politically correct, so the poster feels like anything they feel like saying they should say, Muskin commented.

So, celebrities who tweet about themselves — and your friends who unnecessarily detail every moment of their lives on Facebook — don't necessarily have big egos: They may just enjoy the simple pleasures of life much more than most of us.

Dealing with your moody teenager

T. MICHELLE MURPHY
Metro New York

Teenage years are often the hardest to get through — not just for adolescents, but for their parents as well.

The transitional years between ages 13 and 19 bring an onslaught of internal and external conflict — ranging from pressure at school to hormonal changes. Young adults might shut down or even act out when they're trying to cope.

Dr. Gregory L. Jantz, founder of The Center for Counseling and Health Resources, recently published When Your Teenager Becomes the Stranger in Your House. We asked him to tell us more about what teenagers are going through, how parents can detect early warning signs and how to ease this difficult period for the whole family.

It seems like all teenagers are excessively moody. Why is that?

One of the things is the technology issue. We're finding an interesting trend with how young people are consumed with technology, as far as text messaging and screen time.

There reaches a point where the brain is oversaturated and overstimulated, and we end up creating a depressed brain with over-anxiousness. About 20 per cent of our teenagers (in the U.S.) are clinically depressed. That's different than moodiness.

Quote

"Let teens have their emotions, and don't rescue them. You're the parent, not the friend. If we're helicopter parents, they're not going to learn to deal with the three (adult) emotions of anger, fear and guilt." Dr. Gregory L. Jantz

You talk about girls and boys separately — how are their experiences different?

There are gender differences (as far as) what's going on in the brain. A boy handles depression and moodiness differently than females. Of course, testosterone is an aggression chemical, so boys may be acting out more in a physical sense. Girls who have unresolved depression ... the more the intensity, the more inward they become. And with girls, we're seeing this at earlier and earlier ages.

How can parents communicate when teens are working so hard to shut them out?

There are three things they need from us: They need to feel accepted, understood and affirmed by us. I think oftentimes we can get very judgmental — and remember, they're hypersensitive to anything critical. (They need) to know they have value. This doesn't mean you agree with everything they say. Too often we want to fix things quickly, but we should be sure that we're listening first.

She's at that moody age. ISTOCK

A look at the pitfalls of financial infidelity

Spending and lying. It starts with a little fib about a big purchase. Next thing you know, your relationship is in tatters

YOUR MONEY
Alison Griffiths
money@metronews.ca
alisongriffiths.ca
griffiths.alison@gmail.com

One of my favourite blues CDs include tunes from the first half of the 20th century. They're sung by big-voiced women and mostly about lyin', cheatin', no- good men. In one song, the singer vows to cut her man "wide and deep" if she catches up to him.

I was playing the CD recently when I realized that while the theme of the songs was infidelity, it wasn't always about another woman, but rather money. "You took my money and you run, run, run/I'm gonna hunt ya down and you'll be done, done done."

Financial infidelity is as old as the other kind. And often, like the other kind, it starts relatively innocently — a small lie about a purchase or a deflection about a debt. At its worst, as television producer Carol Ross Joynt writes about in her 2011 book Innocent Spouse, one partner has a completely secret financial life. After her successful and wealthy restaurateur husband died suddenly of pneumonia, she discovered he owed $3 million to the IRS.

Most financial infidelity doesn't have such monumental consequences but if you are the victim, uncovering unpaid bills or a hidden cache of cash can slice through a relationship as effectively as an affair.

Alison's money rule

"Financial infidelity is as damaging to a relationship as an affair."

Is ignorance really bliss?

A look at who's spending and telling in relationships:

- 28%. Check with their spouse on every single purchase
- 6%. Never tell their spouse what they spend on anything. (April 2012, Today.com/Self.com survey)

More than 23,000 people responded to recent survey by Today.com and Self.com revealing that 37 per cent of men and 56 per cent of women have lied to their partner about money.

A similar survey conducted in 2009 by Credit Canada Debt Solutions for Credit Education Week Canada indicated that there is considerable lyin' and cheatin' going on between partners about money.

To prevent your relationship from foundering on the rocks of financial infidelity, here are a few basic rules to follow:

1. Each person should have some 'fun money' completely separate from the household accounts.
2. Even after making a stupid purchase, reveal the true price to your partner.
3. If conflict over money is longstanding in your relationship, consider marital counselling to get to the heart of the problem.
4. If you are feeling victimized financially, ask yourself if you are actually enabling the other person.
5. If you are hiding money because you don't trust your partner's financial management skills, try credit counselling through a reputable organization such as Credit Canada Debt Solutions (creditcanada.com.)

Home-buying pressure won't always result in diamonds

FUN AND FRUGAL
Leslie Scorgie
money@metronews.ca
Twitter @Lesleyscorgie

These days I find myself glued to my inbox waiting with great anticipation for the dingle of my next property-match email. Will it be 'the one?'

I sold my house and officially have 45 days to be out. Given the short timeframe, I feel a lot of pressure to buy. I've visited over 25 listings and still haven't found the right place. But I'm not going to cave and settle for a so-so property.

I find home hunting similar to selecting a life partner. You gather together your must-have criteria and begin the search. Under pressure, it's tempting to compromise on certain aspects of your criteria, like price or square footage, but that's rarely a good idea. A miscalculated choice can result in too much debt, unhappiness, a mediocre location or poor resale ability.

There are three home-buying criteria that can have a particularly large financial impact.

Location. Location is cited as the most important criteria for determining a home's value. Consider the proximity to downtown, commute times, access to transit, schools, grocery stores and bicycle paths. At a street-specific level, avoid high traffic, noisy roads or places that have awkward accessibility. Pick a desirable neighbourhood where homes sell at consistent fair prices and in reasonable timeframes.

House Price. Be realistic. Does your desired square footage, in a hot location, translate into a $2-million home when you can only afford $500,000? Overextending your borrowing will result in home poverty; not being able to afford anything but the mortgage payment. Compare prices in your desired location to ensure you don't overpay and put your equity at risk.

Don't settle for a house you only have lukewarm feelings about. ISTOCK IMAGES

Condition. A proper home inspection can determine if the property is in rough shape. An inspector will look for cracks, mould, dampness, plumbing issues and other costly items that compromise the structural integrity of the property.

Major issues tend to result in unforeseen expenses and can decrease the value of the home, so steer clear. If the aesthetic condition isn't to your liking, determine whether there's room to add value (for limited cost) by renovating the bathroom, kitchen, painting, updating fixtures or replacing flooring.

A house purchase is a huge personal and financial commitment. Don't settle for second-best. Stick to your criteria and find something that's just right for you.

Canada's Ryder still on top in Italy

Canada's Ryder Hesjedal remains the man to beat at the Giro d'Italia.

The Victoria cyclist was seventh in Monday's stage to hold onto the pink leader's jersey, avoiding a crash on the final turn that took out several of the top contenders.

"Another perfect day by the team," Hesjedal said. "We took control in the approach to the last hills and I was able to benefit from perfect position."

Rested Devils felled by rolling Rangers

NHL. New York comes alive in third period after ousting Capitals on Saturday night

Rangers rookie Chris Kreider and defenceman Dan Girardi both had a goal and an assist in the third period, and Henrik Lundqvist stopped 21 shots for his fifth career playoff shutout, as weary New York opened the Eastern Conference finals with a 3-0 victory over the well-rested New Jersey Devils on Monday night.

Playing just two days after eliminating Washington in a stirring 2-1 Game 7 victory, the top-seeded Rangers hit their home ice again and won their third straight Game 1 of these playoffs. The Devils had been off for five days since they knocked out the Philadelphia Flyers in five games.

Shaking off suggestions they are tired, the Rangers slogged through two scoreless periods and pulled out a win with a dominating third period.

"I think it starts with work habits, how hard we want to work," Lundqvist said. "And then the skill takes over. We have been doing it all year."

New York won Round 1 and Round 2 in Game 7s against Ottawa and Washington. No team forced to play seven-game series in the first two rounds has gone on to win the Stanley Cup.

The Rangers are in the conference finals for the first time since 1997, and they haven't reached the Stanley Cup finals since 1994 when they beat 22-year-old goalie Martin Brodeur and the Devils in a classic seven-game series that backed up captain Mark Messier's Game 7 guarantee.

New Jersey is making its first conference finals appearance since 2003, the year they won the cup for the third time.

Girardi, who struggled at times with his defensive duties, got a perfect setup from Kreider and scored 53 seconds into the third period. Playing in just his 13th NHL game, all in these playoffs, Kreider sent a pass back from the right circle in the Devils' zone to the point. Girardi took long strides as he charged up ice and stepped into a shot that ripped through a screen in front by teammate Derek Stepan. The shot beat Brodeur for Girardi's second goal of the playoffs.

Girardi also earned a secondary assist on Kreider's power-play goal with eight minutes remaining that made it 2-0.

Artem Anisimov, who also assisted on Kreider's goal, scored into an empty net to make it 3-0 with 1:27 left.

NBA. 76ers' Turner turns Game 2 into win in Boston

Evan Turner made the go-ahead layup with 40.4 seconds left and Philadelphia held off Boston with six straight free throws as the 76ers evened their second-round series with an 82-81 victory Monday night.

Turner finished with 10 points and added two free throws with 12 seconds to go. Jrue Holiday scored 18 points and Andre Iguodala added 13, seven assists and six rebounds for the Sixers, who blew a 10-point fourth-quarter lead as the Celtics won Game 1.

Alfonzo off hook for 100-game ban

Major League Baseball and the players' union agreed to drop the 100-game suspension imposed on Colorado Rockies catcher Eliezer Alfonzo for a positive drug test because of the same procedural issues that came up in the Ryan Braun case.

The commissioner's office said Monday that Alonzo's ban was dropped "by mutual agreement of Major League Baseball and the Major League Baseball Players Association."

MLB. Official fired after Braun PED decision

Major League Baseball management has fired Shyam Das, the arbitrator who overturned Ryan Braun's drug suspension in February.

MLB informed Das and the players' association of its decision last week.

Das decided in February to overturn the 50-game suspension of Braun for a positive drug test. Lawyers for the Milwaukee Brewers outfielder argued that the collection procedures specified in baseball's drug agreement for the urine sample were not followed with Braun's sample last Oct. 1 because it was not immediately left at a FedEx office.
